Microfiber VS. Cotton

Cross section of microfiber and cotton threads. Microfiber leaves no residue, contrary to cotton. Microfiber is used in the manufacture of non-woven, woven and knitted textiles. The shape, size and combinations of synthetic fibers are selected for specific characteristics, including: softness, durability, absorption, wicking abilities, water repellency, electrostatics, and filtering capabilities. Can be washed up to 500 times. ECO-conscious (uses less soap & drying time)
